

Abstract

The invention relates to a holding furnace comprising a metering device for molten metal, especially for precisely metering molten light metal during die casting, wherefore the holding furnace is provided with a dosing chamber encompassing a controlled discharge valve.